Thorium is a specialized binary version of Cesium.. It uses an $n \times n$ matrix of bits as a key. The trace of the matrix is added (mod 2) to the plaintext bit to get the ciphertext bit. The key matrix is adjusted as a function of this ciphertext bit. Rows and columns are circular-shifted, depending on the trace of the current key and the latest ciphertext symbol.